By default they are listed in order of most recent date. The “sort by” selection is determined in the back end fields parameters. If you set City and Price as sortable fields then the drop down selections will show and allow you to quickly resort by one of the fields.

You also see a quick search plus the ability for a more Advanced Search.

Via a configuration parameter in the back-end you can indicate to display the ads in 2 columns or one column.

This is the 2 column display:

This is using the gallery display feature of Classifieds Redux. When you mouse over one of the thumbnails, it will almost immediately replace the primary picture, no need to wait for a Lightbox/Shadowbox to load in (those options are still available to you if you prefer).

If you mouse over the map thumbnail, you will get a Google map displayed. Minimum required fields for the Google Map are city and state/province (as in this example you see the city), if the full street address is given then the map will display to the street level.

The fields you wish to display on this page are determined in the back end.

What appears as a normal mailto: link for your email only appears that way on your browser, any bots roaming through the internet cannot see this as an email address.

But of course you can select to use a form or create an image of the email.

Posting a new ad will first present you with selecting a category (the following display is using Modalizer to display the selection screen only, then will re-direct to a full display).

Because of the built-in payment features only one category can be selected. If you are considering upgrading from an older version of ads manager the multiple categories feature is no longer available here.

Following is a full display of the ad insertion screen. The pink fields are designated as required, the blueish are optional fields, these colors can be set in the configuration parameters.

This Post a NEW AD shows a category selected that requires payment, plus it indicates 1 free image and up to 4 paid images. It also shows the PayPal total to be invoiced and the recurring/subscription amount and term. Configuration parameters can turn payment on/off and recurring payments on/off.

Please read our rules before you post your ad!

The built in Captcha is displayed, it will be checked for the correct entry and all required fields will be checked for data before the ad can be submitted. Here is the popup that displays when required information is not entered.

The screenshot shows a web form with several fields. At the top, there are two dropdown menus labeled 'Condition' and 'Delivery type'. Below them is a text block: 'You can upload up to 1 FREE image(s). You can upload up to 3 PAID image(s). You can upload a total of 4 images or pictures in JPEG/PNG/GIF format with a maximum of 5 Megabytes each. The Ad system will automatically create thumbnail(s) of the image(s) you upload.' There are four 'Picture' fields, each with a 'Browse...' button. Below these is a 'Security Code:' field and an 'IP Address:' field containing '127.0.0.1'. A modal dialog box is overlaid on the form, titled 'The page at http://eib says:'. It contains a yellow warning icon and the following text: 'Security Code: : Enter a valid security code', 'Name : Fill this field', 'Phone : Fill this field', 'City : Fill this field', 'State : Fill this field', 'Title : Fill this field', and 'Security Code: : Fill this field'. An 'OK' button is at the bottom of the dialog.

Merely click on the OK button and any fields that are incorrect will be highlighted in yellow.

Just fill in the required information or if you decide to cancel the small button  near the bottom will return you to the previous page.

The screenshot shows a captcha verification screen. At the top, it says 'Security Code: Please enter the following characters you see into the box below'. Below this is a box containing the characters '2nvz' in red. To the right of the box is a yellow rectangular area. Below the box is an 'IP Address:' field containing '127.0.0.1'. At the bottom left, there is a 'Save' button and a small refresh icon.

There are 4 levels of precedence. The sub-category has highest priority. If terms and costs are given for a sub-category then these will display in the selection (just below the category selection). If there are no defined terms and costs for the sub-category, then the main categories terms and costs will be used. If there are no terms and costs defined for the main category, then the terms and costs as defined in the back end configuration parameters (under the image tab) will be used. Because of the scheme used here there cannot be additional sub-categories under any sub-categories.

Also you can see that this category allows for 1 free image and up to 4 more paid images. The image costs will be fixed for all additional images in each category. Again the precedence of sub-category, category and back end parameters will dictate.

As the category term and costs are selected and any pictures costs are then added to the total invoice amount and term will display just above the PayPal buttons. If you decide not to add an image, you will be given the opportunity to remove it and the costs will be adjusted accordingly.

If there are no costs then the user will never see the PayPal buttons, only the Save button.

If they decide to proceed then they have the option of clicking the "Checkout with PayPal" button to pay for all items at one time or (if you allow recurring payments) they can click on the recurring/subscription PayPal button.

If you set recurring payments to no in the back end then the user will never see this button.

They will be setup to having recurring payments made via PayPal based on the terms defined just above the Subscription button.

If the auto post option is set in the back end, then when the payment is confirmed the ad will be activated immediately. If no payment is required then the ad will be activated immediately.

If a logged in user is editing their own ad, they will not be able to change the category, this is to prevent the user to change to a paid category after the ad is active. Also the terms and costs will no longer be shown and additional images can not be inserted after publication, but original images can be changed or deleted. These things can be handled by an administrator (in the back-end).

But when the user is renewing their ad they can change the category and alter or add any images.

An administrator can edit a users ad in the front end or the back and they can change the user, the start date and end dates.
